Report on Certificate Course On Mushroom Cultivation Techniques for the academic year 2023-2024

The Department of Biochemistry conducted a certificate course on Mushroom Cultivation Techniques for the academic year 2023-2024, aimed at students of III B.Sc. Biochemistry and Biotechnology. A total of 48 students enrolled in the course - 37 from III B.Sc. Biochemistry and 11 from III B.Sc. Biotechnology. Both theoretical lessons and hands-on training sessions were conducted to impart knowledge on mushroom cultivation techniques.

On 9th February 2024, we organized a "Hands-on Training on Mushroom Cultivation" session in the L06 classroom at 11:30 am. The students enrolled in the certificate course actively participated in the training and learned the process of cultivating mushrooms. Since oyster mushrooms can be grown under local conditions, the trainer brought spawns and other necessary materials to train the participants.

All participants learned the technique, and each student was provided with spawns and raw materials. Many students prepared their mushroom beds in the department laboratory and placed them in the college mushroom hut. Some students prepared the beds at home and brought them to be stored in the college mushroom hut. The expected results were to be observed after 21 days.

The program was highly beneficial for the students. Based on the quality of the mushrooms and the yield, internal marks were awarded to students for the certificate course. At the end of the course, an online examination was conducted, and the results were declared. Out of 48 students, 40 successfully completed the course, and certificates were issued to them.
